

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The invention provides a method for maintaining a consistent modem carrier level for a wireless communication system. A modem carrier is received at a communication node. The modem carrier signal strength is measured. A determination is made whether the modem carrier signal strength is at a prescribed level, and a modem carrier level instruction is sent from the communication node to adjust the modem carrier level based on the determination.